

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Peter Faulkner, the editor, teaches in the School of English and American Studies at the University of Exeter.

Andrew Heywood has a degree in Philosophy, is the Regional Secretary of the Eastern Region of the Law Society, and contributes to Early Music News and The Friend.

Ashton Nichols teaches at Dickinson College, Pennsylvania; his article is developed from a paper given at the News from Nowhere Conference in 1990.

Norman Talbot of the University of Newcastle in New South Wales is a regular contributor; he is currently editing The Water of the Wondrous Isles for the Thoemmes Press Morris Library.

Charles Harvey and Jon Press are business historians, best known to members for their prize-winning book, William Morris, Design and enterprise in Victorian Britain (1991): Jon Press lives in Bristol.

Geoffrey Syer is a previous contributor who writes on environmental issues and nineteenth-century literature.

Jan Hollm is a German academic working in Berlin, whose article on News from Nowhere appeared in the Spring 1993 issue.